This course is for.

The course is suitable for health care professionals whose clinical practice involves working with radiographic images.

Course aims

The aim of this course is to enhance awareness and improve image recognition of pathological processes of the musculoskeletal system demonstrated on a variety of imaging modalities.

Content

This module is designed for health care professionals with an interest in radiological imaging as part of their practice. The module provides an overview of the role of a variety of imaging modalities in the investigation of pathophysiological processes that affect the musculoskeletal system. It will develop knowledge of patient presentation and aid the referral to appropriate imaging modalities. There will be an emphasis on the image appearances for each imaging modality of normal and the pathological processes upon the musculoskeletal system. The course aims to provide health care professionals with a practical problem-solving approach to making the best use of radiology investigations. The imaging modalities considered include MRI, CT, Nuclear Medicine and Ultrasound.

Assessment

The assessment consists of a timed presentation based on a case study

Who teaches this course?
